Lu Watson reported on the WesPac jet fuel pipeline hearing held before the Transportation Committee of the Los Angeles City Council on April 22. The Community Impact Statement which the HGNNC had filed was reflected on the agenda for file number 90-0670, stating opposition to the project. The South Bay Daily Breeze of April 26 reported on the hearing.

(Llewyn Fowlkes entered the meeting at 7:45 p.m.)

Dr. Stella Robinson (District 8) thanked the HGNNC for all the work that went into putting on the April 4 Health Fair.

4) Speaker from the Bureau of Sanitation on alternative technologies to process our solid waste: Helen Yoon, Bureau of Sanitation, explained that the Bureau is the lead agency for handling the City's solid or black bin waste. City residents generate 10 million tons of waste per year, with 3,600 tons of that coming from our black bins. This waste is currently sent to the Sunshine Canyon Landfill, which is running out of space. Of all major cities, Los Angeles is the best on diverting waste from its landfills, with 64% of all waste being recycled. However, there is now a plan to meet a zero waste goal of over 90% by 2029. There will be a city-wide conference on this issue at the Los Angeles Cathedral on May 30. The Zero Waste plan calls for one alternative technology facility in each of the six City waste sheds, plus one larger facility outside City boundaries. These sites would each process 200-900 tons of waste into energy using biologic and thermal technologies. Currently the Bureau of Sanitation is doing siting studies, with M2/ M3 zones close to freeways being targeted. Sensitive receptors, such as parks, schools, and hospitals would be avoided. The first such facility would open in 2012. Engineer Jorge Santiesteban answered some of the questions which stakeholders had about potential locations of the new waste handling facilities. The HGNNC falls into two waste shed areas: South and also Harbor (south of 120th Street). For more information, contact Miguel Zermeno, Project Manager, at (213) 485-3611 or Miguel.Zermeno@lacity.org or look at www.alternativetechnology.lacity.org

(Eva Cooper entered the meeting at 8:12 p.m.)

5) Stakeholder review of April 14 proposed bylaws revision and final vote by Board of the HGNNC: After discussion and correction of Article IV to read “who declare a stake in the HGNNC Neighborhood Council,” Article VII B6 to read “Newly elected Board Members” instead of “Newly Elected Directors,” and Article VIII D2 last line to read “no longer a HGNNC Board Member” instead of “HGNNC Officer,” Gloria Christmas moved, Joan Jacobs seconded, and it was passed to approve the proposed bylaws changes 12-0

She was honored for her many activities on behalf of her neighborhood.

6) Foreclosure prevention: Jonathan Bislig from L.A. Neighborhood Housing Services, part of the National Neighborhood Network (a coalition of nonprofit organizations offering foreclosure prevention services), discussed their free foreclosure prevention clinics held around Los Angeles County. If after counseling foreclosure still seems inevitable, then housing relocation help is provided. Contact them at 1—888-895-2647. In answer to a stakeholder question, Jonathan said that if a lender agrees, a homeowner may qualify for services under the Obama administration’s recently passed mortgage support program. More information about this program is available at www.makinghomeaffordable.gov.

Charles Doakes, community activist, presented information on the background of the foreclosure crisis and noted that California is one of the four states with the highest rate of foreclosure. He mentioned the Senator Dick Durbin bankruptcy repair bill in Congress, which has not come up for a vote for two years. The previous bill which modified the bankruptcy laws does not allow home loans to be modified in bankruptcy court. He also urged stakeholders to look up information on Sheila Bair, Chair of the U.S. Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC) and her attempts to help homeowners restructure their mortgages.
